HAVA

WATER FROM SWEDEN

STILL & SPARKLING WATER · NINE SPARKLING FLAVOURS

WHO IS HAVA?

SWEDEN, IN A bottle.

HAVA began with a simple idea: water this pure deserves a bottle as beautiful as the place it comes from.

HAVA is still and sparkling water from Sweden, a land of ancient granite, deep pine forest and around 100,000 lakes. We bottle it in heavy clear glass with a brushed gold cap and four letters, drawn as clean as the Swedish landscape. For the dinner table, the hotel room, the bar and the day.

STILL & SPARKLING

Soft and quiet, or with fine, lively bubbles.

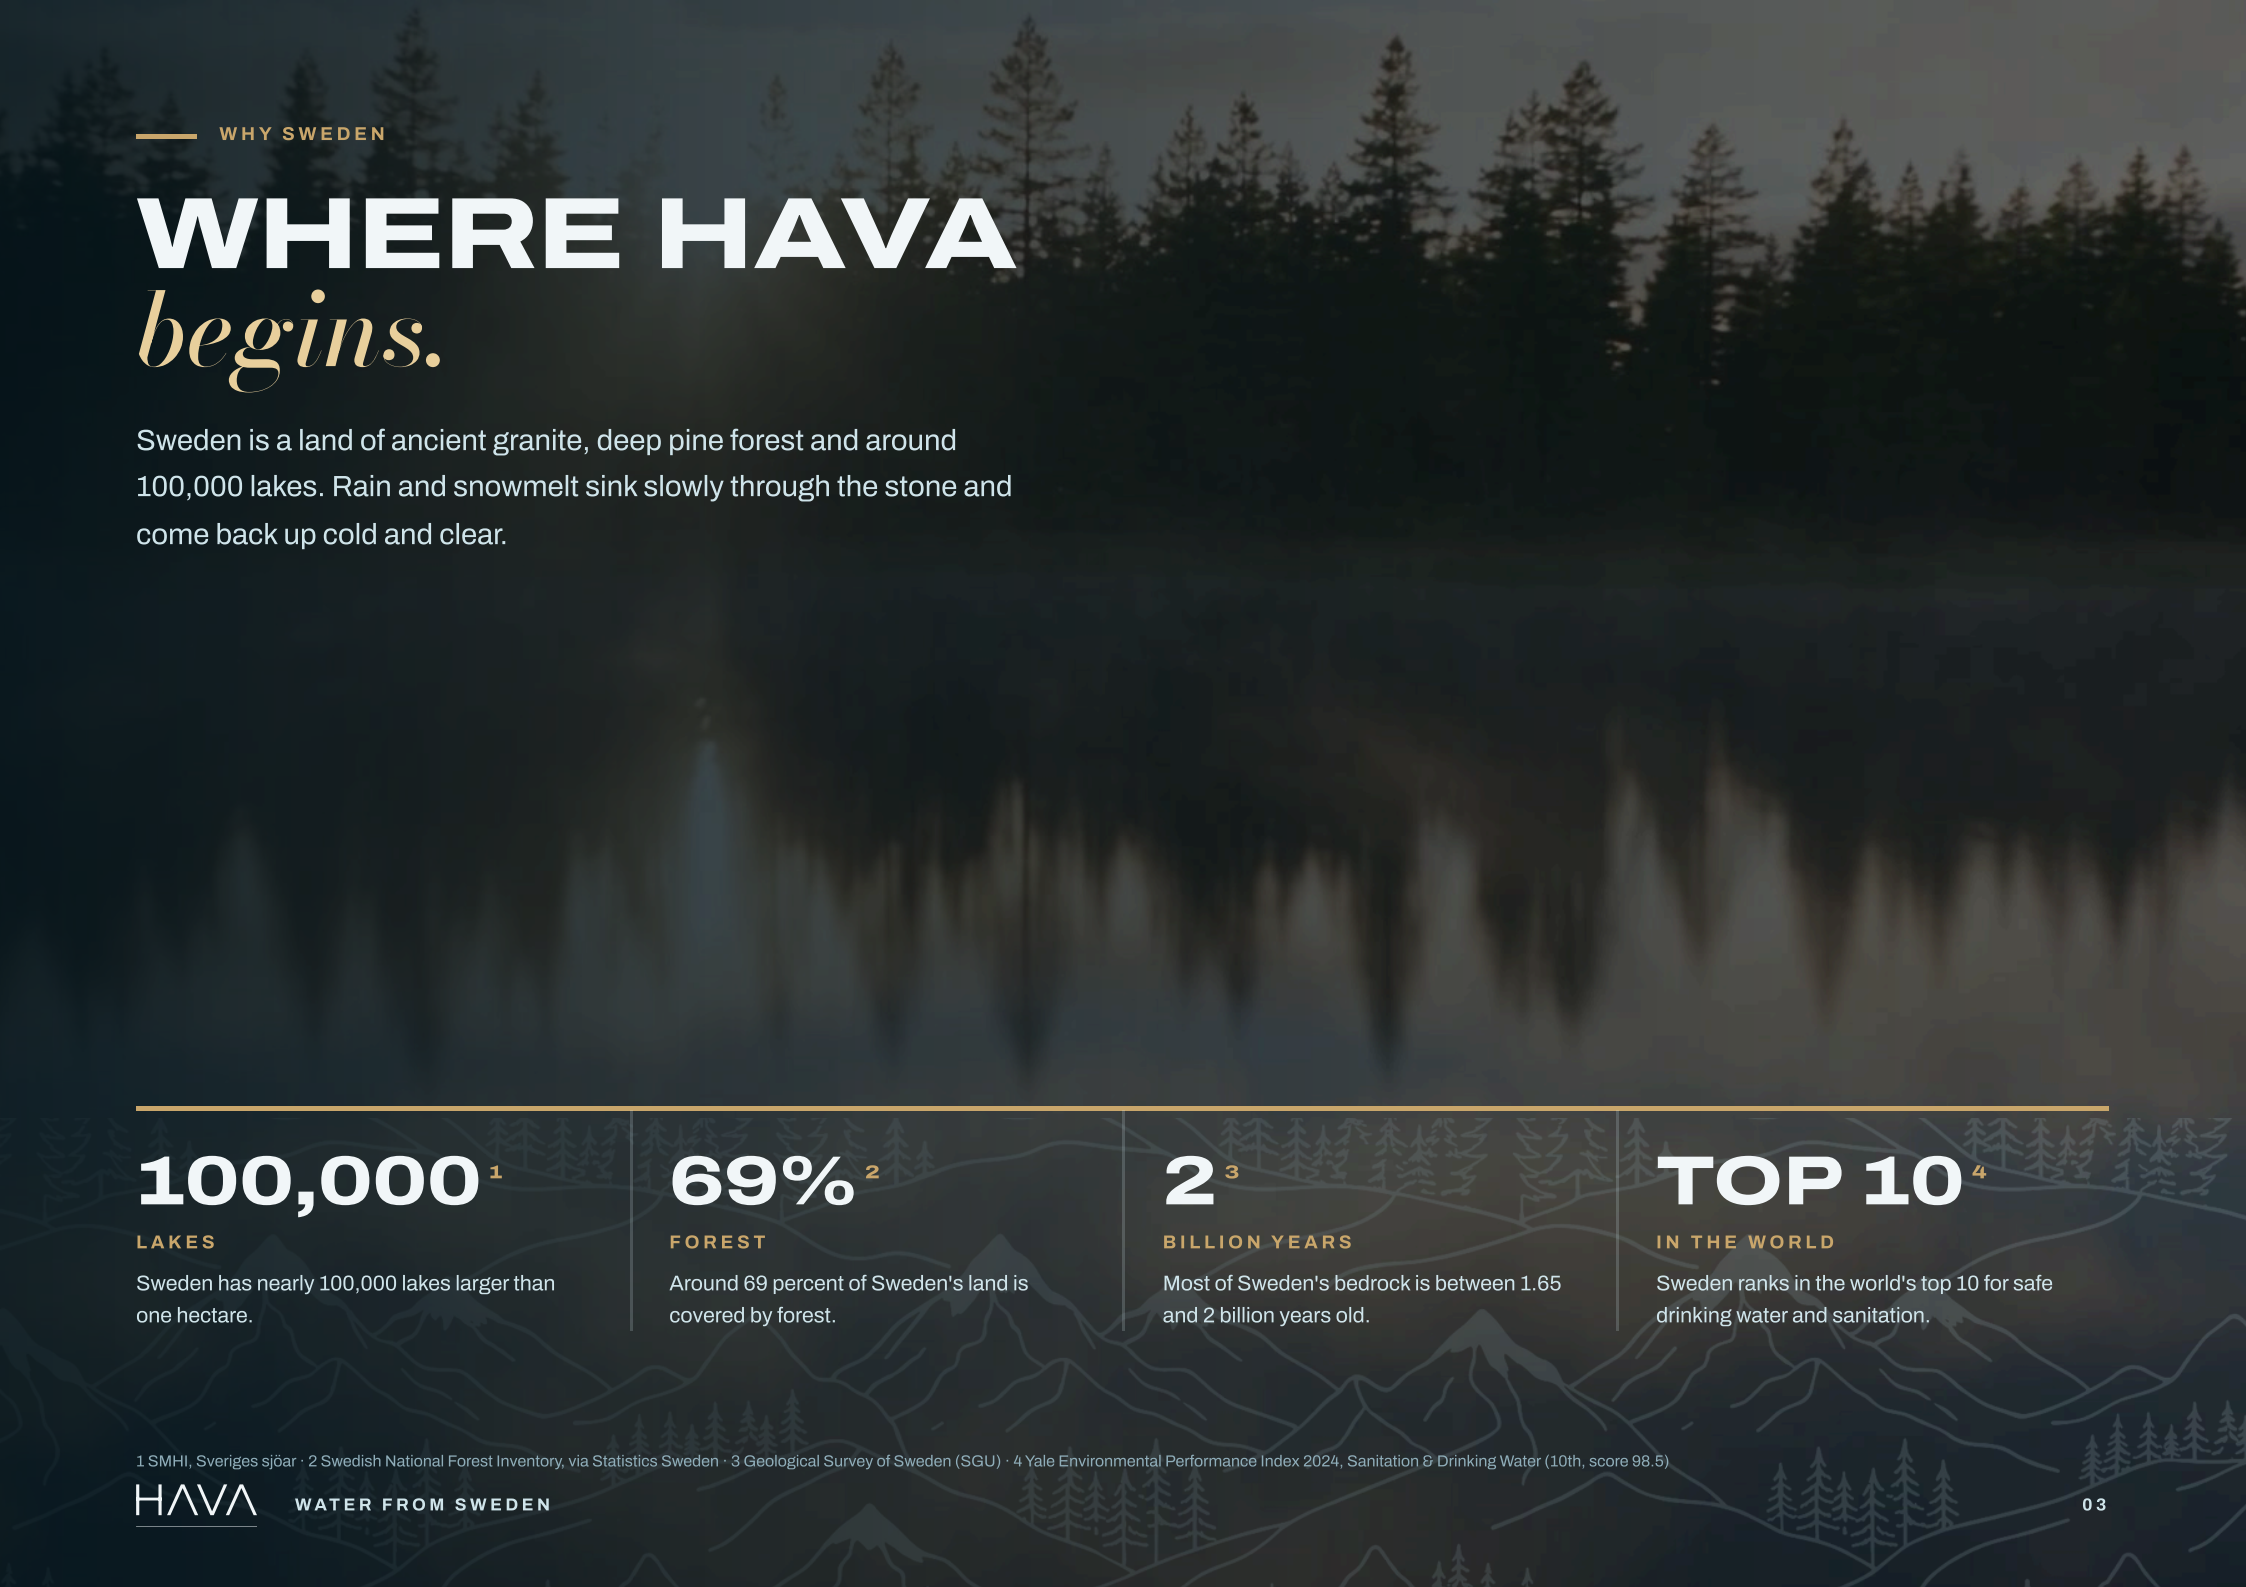

GLASS & GOLD

Heavy clear glass, brushed gold caps, made for the table.

NINE FLAVOURS

Sparkling cans with natural fruit flavours and no preservatives.

WHY SWEDEN

WHERE HAVA begins.

Sweden is a land of ancient granite, deep pine forest and around 100,000 lakes. Rain and snowmelt sink slowly through the stone and come back up cold and clear.

100,000 [1]

LAKES

Sweden has nearly 100,000 lakes larger than one hectare.

69% [2]

FOREST

Around 69 percent of Sweden's land is covered by forest.

2 [3]

BILLION YEARS

Most of Sweden's bedrock is between 1.65 and 2 billion years old.

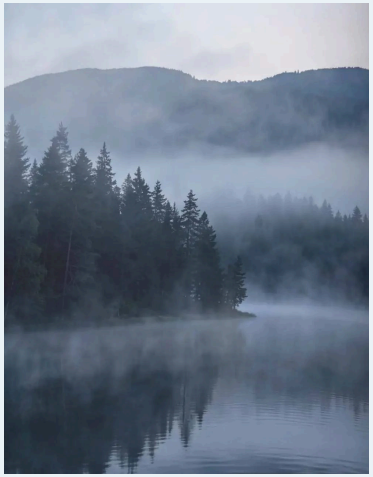

TOP 10 [4]

IN THE WORLD

Sweden ranks in the world's top 10 for safe drinking water and sanitation.

1 SMHI, Sveriges sjöar · 2 Swedish National Forest Inventory, via Statistics Sweden · 3 Geological Survey of Sweden (SGU) · 4 Yale Environmental Performance Index 2024, Sanitation & Drinking Water (10th, score 98.5)

FROM SKY TO bottle.

01

RAIN AND SNOW

Rain and winter snow fall on a quiet northern land of forest, lakes and open sky.

02

THE FOREST

Moss, roots and pine needles slow the water down on its way into the ground.

03

THE STONE

Granite and gneiss, some of the oldest rock in Europe, give little to the water. It stays soft and light.

04

THE ICE

The last ice sheet left long ridges of sand and gravel, eskers, that water passes through slowly and comes out clear.

05

THE CARE

In Sweden, drinking water is regulated as a food by the Swedish Food Agency.
